Editorial Standards

Censored Expressions strives for accuracy, transparency, fairness, accountability, and editorial independence.

Editorials should be tied to the specific facts being discussed, distinguish commentary from straight reporting, avoid generic responses detached from the article, and disclose when AI-assisted workflows are materially involved.

The site may use multiple sources, article memory, summaries, and editorial judgment to select topics, but internal ranking data should not be presented to readers as a substitute for opinion, analysis, or accountability.

Verified factual errors should be corrected when appropriate.
